

The Art of Kyo-Kanoko Shibori Process

Sandra Lee Chandler

Kanoko shibori is the closest to what you may know as tie-dye. The cloth kumo shibori is a technique similar to the tie-dye you might be familiar with. To create the pattern, the cloth is folded or pleated, and then bound with thread or rubber bands. This method is particularly effective for making circular shapes. On the other hand, Kumo shibori involves wrapping the cloth around objects and binding them into finger-like shapes. s pleated or folded and bound with thread or rubber bands to achieve the patterning. This is a good method for creating circular shapes. Kumo shibori involves wrapping cloth, sometimes around objects, into finger-like bindings.

Indigo Supplies: kit fee $45

Materials included in the class kit:

- Use of blocks, rubber bands, clamps, rubber stamps, paintbrushes, woodblocks. beans, popsicle sticks, wood clamps, etc.
- 1 Pair of gloves.
- Thread and needle for stitch resist
- Use of Indigo vat
- Mud Resist vat
- 1 yard 100% Cotton

Supply List (students will bring these items to the workshop)

Indigo Supplies: (additional supplies)

- 2 yards of white 100% Cotton Fabrics (in addition to the fabric in kit)

SANDRA LEE
DESIGN

The Art of Kyo-Kanoko Shibori Process Sandra Lee Chandler

